Network set up to deal with travellers

Traveller site spaces needed says council

By Kit SANDEMAN
Local Democracy Reporter
newsdesk@chad.co.uk

Better and more streamlined powers are needed to evict travellers who are trespassing, according to Nottinghamshire County Council.

The authority said it has had at least 17 unauthorised encampments on its land in the last two years and that on one occasion it took 17 weeks to evict a group of travellers.

The council suggests having the power to issue on-the-spot fines, or to seize assets of repeat offenders could act as a deterrent, but may also cause public order issues.

Simplified powers would make it easier for the council to evict travellers efficiently, and speeding up the process would limit the impact on the settled community.

The council was responding to a Government consultation on the range of powers available to councils to deal with unauthorised encampments, which was launched in April.

The consultation response said: "If there is evidence of the same people returning after a possession order the ability to issue on-the-spot penalty fines or seize assets may discourage repeat offending."

"However, this action may result in public order issues and further fractures in the cohesion between settled and travelling communities."

"In Nottinghamshire, a countywide network has been established with the aim of developing consistent approaches by the police, county, city and the seven borough and district councils.

"This network is a recent development and all partner organisations recognise the issues faced by both the settled community and travellers."

The council also says that it hopes to improve its communication with people living near where travellers are.

Mansfield District Council has launched an eight-week consultation over the provision of gypsy and traveller sites in the district.

It is encouraging landowners in the area to come forward with offers of plots suitable for use by the gypsy and traveller community.

The council has identified a need for three permanent residential pitches for up to six caravans, along with one transit site for short-term use.

The consultation forms part of the Local Plan which will steer the development of the district up to 2033.

The council is hoping the gypsy and traveller community itself will engage with the consultation to help establish how much land will be needed. It is estimated about half a hectare will be needed for both sites.

Councillor Bill Drewett, council portfolio holder for safer communities, said: "The council has duty to accommodate gypsies and travellers as part of the Local Plan, and through this consultation we want to find out how best we should do that."

"I hope people will take the time to engage with us on how best to provide for gypsies and travellers."

The consultation will close at 5pm on August 27.

Consultation documents can be viewed in local libraries, leisure centres and at the Civic Centre.

More space is needed to accommodate travellers.

Nottinghamshire County Council.
